PREFACE

In the first volume of plates illustrations were given of the handiwork of those peoples whose history was written in the first four volumes of the Cambridge Ancient History. The purpose of the present book is to provide illustrations for vols. v and vi of that work, which treat of the Mediterranean world of which Greece was the centre during the fifth and fourth centuries b.c. This explains the fact that the major part of this volume is devoted to examples of Greek sculpture, painting and architecture of those centuries; but since the chapter on Greek Art in vol. v treats of late archaic, as well as of classical Greek art, works of the closing decades of the sixth century are also given. Besides these will be found illustrations of coins which are cited in the text as possessing evidential importance for history and some specimens of Egyptian work selected to make clear certain points in vol. vi, chap. vi.

Thus the purpose of this volume is ancillary, and consideration of this has governed the selection of subjects for illustration. For this in Greek sculpture and painting the volume is indebted to Professor Beazley, in Greek architecture to Mr D. S. Robertson, in Egyptian Art to Dr H. R. Hall. The writers of the various historical chapters have been consulted about the choice of the coins. The responsibility for the limitation of plates, which is due to the desire to keep the volume within certain bounds of price, does not, however, rest with the contributors to vols. v and vi. The commentaries on the plates illustrating art and architecture are due to the several contributors<sup>1</sup>; for the commentary on the coins and Greek fortifications the present writer is responsible.

It is hoped that this volume will be of assistance to readers of vols. v and vi; at the same time the volume itself has, within its limits, an interest of its own. For the reader may gain an idea of the progress of Greek sculpture, painting and architecture, and in the plates of coins he will find not only evidence for political history but evidence of art as well. Moreover, the few Egyptian antiquities of Saïte and early Ptolemaic times both serve their immediate purpose of illustrating the text and show something of the later phases of Egyptian art.

Grateful acknowledgments are due to the Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies for the loan of photographs, and to Mrs Beazley, Mr Ashmole, Dr K. Neugebauer, Mr L. P. Thompson and Mr M. Ziffo for supplying photographs in their possession, as well as to the Director of the British Museum for permission to reproduce numerous pictures, including that of the recently acquired decadrachm depicting Alexander pursuing the elephant of Porus, to Professors R. Zahn and Valentin Müller for prints from the Antiquarium and the University in Berlin, to Dr Caskey, Miss G. M. A. Richter and Professor B. Schröder for prints from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Albertinum in Dresden. The Preussische Akademie der Wissenschaften and the Deutsches Archaeologisches Institut have again generously sanctioned the reproduction of various pictures. For the provision of plaster casts of coins thanks are due to Dr G. F. Hill, Keeper of Coins and Medals in the British Museum, to Professor K. Regling, Monsieur J. Babelon and Monsieur V. Tourneur of the Cabinets of Coins in Berlin, in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, and in Brussels, and also to Monsieur R. Jameson.

The following publishers have kindly sanctioned the reproduction of pictures from the books specified:

PREFACE

The care and accuracy of the Staff of the University Press is again deserving of grateful acknowledgment.

The design on the outside cover represents a bronze statuette of a hoplite, wearing a crested Corinthian helmet, a cuirass and greaves, and carrying a shield of Boeotian shape. This figurine, found at Dodona and now in Berlin, is of the early fifth century B.C.

COINAGE OF THE FIFTH CENTURY

[a], [b], [c] Gold coins of Syracuse, Gela and Acragias issued probably under pressure from the Carthaginian invasion 410–406 B.C.
 [a] ΣΥΡΑ. Head of Heracles. Rev. ΣΥΡΑ. Head of Arethusa.
 [b] ΓΕΛΑΣ. Protome of river-bull. Rev. ΣΩΣΙΓΟΛΙΣ. Head of goddess.
 [c] ΑΚΡΑ. Eagle. Rev. ΣΙΛΑΝΟΣ (magistrate). Crab. Formerly Pozzi Coll. 603, 444, 385. Wts. [a] 1·15 g.; [b] 1·13 g.; [c] 1·32 g. (v, 22.)

The Carthaginian invasion produced the first Punic coinage.

[d] Tetradrachm minted in Sicily 410–406 B.C. Nike over horse. Rev. Date-palm (Punic inscr.) ‘The Camp.’ Brit. Mus. Wt. 16·85 g. (v, 23.)

[e], [f], [g] The principal currency of the Greeks in Asia Minor was of electrum: typical are staters of Cyzicus, Mitylene and Lampsacus which retain as reverse the archaic type of quartered incuse square. [e] Tunny fish (the city device), over it Delphic omphalos between eagles. Formerly Sir H. Weber Coll. 5024. Wt. 16·03 g. [f] ΜΥΤΙ. Head of Apollo. B. M. C. Troas, etc., p. 158, 28. Wt. 15·45 g. [g] Protome of Pegasus in vine-wreath. B. M. C. Mysia, p. 79, 8. Wt. 15·26 g. (v, 23; vi, 59.)

[h] Themistocles as ruler of Magnesia. About 463–450 B.C. Didrachm of Attic weight. ΘΕΜΙΣΤΟΚΛΕΙΟΣ. Apollo with bay-laurel branch and falcon. Rev. ΜΑ. Falcon. Berlin Mus. Wt. 8·59 g. (v, 64.)

[i] Rhodes. Tetradrachm of Attic weight. About 407 B.C. Head of Helios. Rev. ΡΟΔΙΟΝ. Rose and two bunches of grapes. Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 16·92 g. (v, 23, 355.)

Between 478 and 457 B.C. certain Boeotian cities, repudiating Theban supremacy, issued autonomous coins with a Boeotian shield as obverse type.

[j], [k] [j] Haliartus. Stater. Rev. ΑΡΙ (Ariartus). Amphora. [k] Tanagra. Stater. Rev. ΤΑ. Protome of horse. B. M. C. Central Greece, p. 49, 11; p. 61, 23. Wts. 12·21 g.; 11·89 g. (v, 79.)

[l] Himera. Under the rule of Theron and Thrasydaeus of Acragias. About 482–472 B.C. Didrachm. ΗΙΜΕΡΑ. Cock. Rev. Crab (device of Acragias). Formerly Pozzi Coll. 453. Wt. 8·5 g. (v, 146.)

[m] Syracuse under Hiero. Tetradrachm struck shortly after his naval victory over the Etruscans in 474 B.C. Victorious Chariot; beneath, a sea monster. Rev. Head of Arethusa and dolphins (cf. the ‘Demareteion’ struck in 480 B.C., Vol. of Plates, i, 308 [g]). Formerly Pozzi Coll. 573. Wt. 17·08 g. (v, 148.)

[n] Aetna. Founded by Hiero in 475 B.C. on the site of Catana. Tetradrachm. ΑΙΤΝΑΙΟΝ. Head of Silenus, scarabaeus below. Rev. Zeus enthroned, pine tree and eagle. Brussels Mus. Wt. 17·24 g. (v, 147.)

[o] Catana restored in 461 B.C. Tetradrachm. Chariot. Rev. ΚΑΤΑΝΑΙΟΝ. Head of Apollo. Formerly Pozzi Coll. 410. Wt. 17·21 g. (v, 155.)

COINAGE OF THE FIFTH AND FOURTH CENTURIES

[a] Tetradrachm probably minted by the Athenian Fleet in Samos in 411 B.C. To the customary Athenian type is added a small bull's head (a city device of Samos). Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 16.50 g. (v, 333.)

[b], [c] New Sybaris. Founded in 445 B.C. Tetrobol. Thurii founded in 443 B.C. Stater. The obverse type of both is Athenian; the bull on the reverse having been the type of old Sybaris (cf. Vol. of Plates, i, 306 [f]). [b] Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 2.38 g. [c] Formerly Pozzi Coll. 226. Wt. 7.7 g. (v, 168.)

[d] Athens. Gold drachma, 407–406 B.C. For this coinage golden statues of Victory were melted before the battle of Arginusae. Berlin Mus. Wt. 4.3 g. (v, 22, 355.)

[e] Athens. Copper tetradrachm thinly washed with silver, first issued in 406 B.C. after the treasury was exhausted. This money of necessity was demonetized in 393 B.C. (cf. Aristophanes, Frogs, 717–732; Eccles. 816–822). Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 18 g. (v, 355; vi, 35.)

[f], [g], [h] Three coins struck during the Satraps' revolt against Persia. [f] Datames, Satrap of Cappadocia. Persic drachm, about 372–366 B.C., struck at Sinope with the types of that city. Head of nymph. Rev. Sea-eagle on dolphin; beneath, ΔΑΤΑΜΑ. Brit. Mus. Wt. 5.89 g. (vi, 20.) [g] Orontes, Satrap of Dascylum. Gold stater issued about 362 B.C. in Lampsacus. Idealized portrait of the Satrap. Rev. Protome of Pegasus. Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 8.43 g. (vi, 21.) [h] Gold stater issued by Tachos (or Taos), King of Egypt, who, with Athenian aid, supported the Satraps in revolt. About 366–359 B.C. The weight is that of a Persian daric, the types Athenian, the legend, ΤΑΟ. Brit. Mus. Wt. 8.3 g. (vi, 21.)

[i] Gold coin of daric weight, probably minted by Thibron at Ephesus as pay for the remnant of 'the Ten Thousand,' in 399 B.C. Obv. Bee. Rev. Quartered incuse square. Jameson Coll. Wt. 8.29 g. (vi, 38.)

[j] Thebes. Quarter stater of pale gold issued in 394 B.C., possibly from Persian subsidies. Head of Dionysus. Rev. Infant Heracles strangling serpents. Jameson Coll. Wt. 3.02 g. (vi, 49.)

[k]–[p] The silver coinage of a Maritime League founded shortly after Conon's victory over the Spartans off Cnidus in 394 B.C. ΣΥΝ(μαχικόν) appears on all the coins, and pro-Theban sympathies induced the common obverse type of Heracles strangling serpents, while each state placed on the reverse its own city device.

[k] Rhodes. Rose. [l] Cnidus. Head of Aphrodite and prow. [m] Samos. Lion's scalp. [n] Iasus. Head of Apollo. [o] Ephesus. Bee. [p] Byzantium. Bull on dolphin. The British Museum has recently acquired a coin of a seventh member of this League, hitherto unknown, Cyzicus. Tunny fish and lion's head (Brit. Mus. Quarterly, ii, p. 59, Pl. XXXV, 1). [k], [p] Boston Mus., Warren Coll. Wts. 11.35 g.; 11.29 g. [l]–[o] Berlin Mus. Wts. 11.35 g.; 11.02 g.; 10.73 g.; 10.76 g. (vi, 50.)

COINAGE OF THE FOURTH CENTURY

- [a], [b], [c] Autonomous silver coins of Boeotian cities issued 381–379 B.C. during the eclipse of Theban power, cf. p. 2 [j], [k]. All have a Boeotian shield as obverse type. [a] Thespiae. Head of Aphrodite Melainis and two crescents. [b] Plataea. Head of Hera. [c] Orchomenus. EPXO. Amphora. [a], [b] Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wts. 12·4 g.; 2·76 g. [c] B. M. C. Central Greece, p. 54, 22. Wt. 12 g. (vi, 64.)
- [d] The Arcadians at Olympia. Gold coinage minted from the sacred treasures, ostensibly in the name of the Pisatans in 364 B.C., though the types—Zeus and thunderbolt—are those of Elean issues at Olympia. ΠΙΣΑ beside the thunderbolt fixes responsibility on the Eleans' rivals. B. M. C. Pelop., p. 76, 1. Wt. 1·04 g. (vi, 98.)
- [e] Alexander of Pherae, as Tagus of Thessaly, 369–357 B.C. Stater. Head of Hecate. Rev. Horseman; beneath, double axe. B. M. C. Thessaly, p. 47, 14. Wt. 11·86 g. (vi, 84.)
- [f] Federal coinage struck as pay for the mercenaries of the Arcadian League, founded about 370 B.C. Silver stater with the head of Zeus, and Pan seated on a mountain-top, types which were later continued on the coins of Megalopolis, the new capital of this League. B. M. C. Pelop., p. 173, 48. Wt. 12·34 g. (vi, 88.)
- [g] The Achaean League first issued a Federal coinage about 366 B.C., the principal unit being a stater with the head of Artemis Laphria and the figure of Zeus Amarius. Brit. Mus. Wt. 12 g. (vi, 95.)
- [h] Carthaginian tetradrachm minted at Panormus shortly after 400 B.C., the types being copied from Syracusean models. Under the chariot appears the enigmatic Punic legend 'Ziz.' B. M. C. Italy, p. 247, 10. Wt. 17·43 g. (vi, 109.)
- [i] Himera after its destruction by the Carthaginians was re-founded as Thermae, a Punic settlement to which Greeks migrated. Its tetradrachms, Punic in character, are at first anepigraphic but later bear the Greek legend ΘΕΡΜΙΤΑΝ. Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 17·3 g. (vi, 110.)
- [j] Issa, off the Dalmatian coast, as a Syracusean colony of Dionysius I. A bronze coin of Sicilian fabric with the head of the hero ΙΩΝΙΟΣ and a dolphin. Glasgow, Hunter Coll. (vi, 129 sq.)
- [k] Catana and Leontini about 403 B.C. formed a defensive alliance against Dionysius I, which is attested by this hemidrachm, with ΛΕΩΝ, head of Apollo and KATANAION, river-bull and fish. Jameson Coll. Wt. 1·93 g. (vi, 119.)
- [l]–[p] Coinage of Philip of Macedon. Before 356 B.C. Thasian settlers on this mainland, at the mining town of Crenides, issued gold staters [l] with the head of Heracles and a tripod, inscribed ΘΑΣΙΟΝ ΗΠΕΙΡΟ. After Philip annexed this settlement in 356 B.C., and renamed it Philippi, a few gold coins appeared [m] with identical types, but with legend ΦΙΛΙΠΠΩΝ. These were quickly superseded by the royal Macedonian coinage, [n], [o] a half-stater and stater with the inscription ΦΙΛΙΠΠΟΥ. The latter coin obtained a world-wide reputation and was imitated from the Danube to Northumbria. [p] A silver tetradrachm struck contemporaneously with the last coins, the reverse type of which, a victorious racehorse, refers to Philip's victory at Olympia in 356 B.C. [m] B. M. C. Macedonia, p. 96, 1. Wt. 8·62 g. [l], [n]–[p] Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wts. —; 4·3 g.; 8·6 g.; 14·48 g. (vi, 208, 209.)

COINAGE OF THE FOURTH CENTURY

[a] Mausolus, Dynast of Caria, obtained possession of the island of Cos, 355 b.c. To this period belongs a Coan tetradrachm with head of Heracles whose features resemble those of the prince. The crab is the civic device. B. M. C. Caria, p. 195, 11. Wt. 14·3 g. (vi, 212.)

[b], [c] Bronze coinage of the Sacred War minted in Phocis by Onomarchus and his successor Phalaecus, 356–346 b.c. The bull's head on each is the Phocian device and ONYMAPXOY and ΦΑΛΑΙΚΟΥ appear within the wreaths. [b] B. M. C. Central Greece, p. 23, 104. [c] Sir H. Weber Coll. 3184. (vi, 216.)

[d] The Amphictyonic Council issued in the spring of 338 b.c. silver staters in its own name. The head of Demeter of Anthela, the figure of Pythian Apollo and the inscription ΑΜΦΙΚΤΙΩΝΩΝ appear on the coins. B. M. C. Central Greece, p. 27, 22. Wt. 12·14 g. (vi, 260.)

[e]–[h] Timoleon in Sicily, 343–337 b.c. [f] The Syracusean silver coinage of Timoleon resembles [e] the contemporary Corinthian coinage, but the former bears the Syracusean ethnic. Some of his bronze coins [g] have a bearded head, identified as Archias, the first Corinthian founder of Syracuse. Acragas, after Timoleon's resettlement, renewed its coinage [h], combining the free horse, a Syracusean type, with a crab, the original city's device. [e], [f] B. M. C. Corinth, etc., p. 47, 390; p. 98, 3. Wts. 8·21 g.; 8·66 g. [g] Giesecke Coll. [h] B. M. C. Sicily, p. 13, 75. Wt. 2·1 g. (vi, 293, 298.)

[i]–[k] [i] Silver stater of Alexander, son of Neoptolemus, King of Epirus, struck probably at Tarentum 334–332 b.c.; contemporary with this is a bronze coin [j] of Syracuse, with head of Zeus, thunderbolt and eagle as on the Tarentine piece. Locri in South Italy issued at the same time a silver stater [k] with kindred types. This similarity of types may indicate an alliance. [i] B. M. C. Thessaly, etc., p. 110, 3. Wt. 10·71 g. [j] Berlin Mus. [k] B. M. C. Italy, p. 364, 6. Wt. 7·65 g. (vi, 301.)

[l]–[o] Alexander the Great. [l] The king's portrait on a tetradrachm of Lysimachus struck in 300 b.c. [m], [o] Gold staters of Alexander's Imperial coinage, the first minted in Macedon with the serpent on Athena's helmet and the name ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΥ behind Nike; the second minted in the East with the Persian lion-gryphon on the helmet and the title ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ added. [n] A silver tetradrachm minted in Macedon. [l], [m] Seltman Coll. Wts. 16·29 g.; 8·6 g. [n] Formerly Pozzi Coll. Wt. 17·17 g. [o] Bibl. Nat. Paris. Wt. 8·58 g. (vi, 155, 387, 427.)

COINAGE OF THE FOURTH AND THIRD CENTURIES. ALEXANDER'S EMPIRE

[a] Decadrachm struck, perhaps in Babylon, shortly after Alexander's death, depicting him on horseback pursuing the elephant of the Indian King Porus. On the reverse is a figure of Alexander holding a thunderbolt. Brit. Mus. Quarterly, i, p. 36. Wt. 39·62 g. (vi, 409.)

[b] Tetradrachm of Seleucus I. The elephant, the anchor, and the head of the horned horse Bucephalus, all badges of the Seleucid dynasty, appear on this coin. Seleucus set especial store by elephants as a weapon in war and bartered whole provinces to obtain them. Berlin Mus. Wt. 16·59 g. (vi, 409.)

[c] Agathocles, King of Bactria and North-West India, about 150 B.C. issued a series of tetradrachms commemorating his predecessors and bearing the coin-types which each of them had once employed. On this series, Diodotus and Euthydemus are designated gods, Alexander is merely 'Son of Philip.' In Central Asia he was not 'divine.' B. M. C. India, Greek and Scythic Kings, p. 10, 1. Wt. 16·28 g. (vi, 433.)

[d] Tetradrachm minted by Archon, Satrap of Babylon, about 322 B.C. The issue of this and other Satrapal coins, after Alexander's death, indicates the increased authority of the local governors. B. M. C. Arabia, etc., p. 185, 22. Wt. 16·94 g. (vi, 465.)

[e] Cassander, King of Macedon, claiming to be the successor of the Macedonian Philip, revived on his bronze coinage the types employed by Alexander's father, the head of Heracles and the victorious race-horse (cf. p. 6 [n], [p] above). Seltman Coll. (vi, 482.)

[f] Cassander's crazy brother Alexarchus refounded Sane on the peninsula of Acte as Uranopolis and issued fanciful coins for his 'children of heaven.' On the obverse of the tetradrachm is Aphrodite Urania seated on the globe and the legend ΟΥΡΑΝΙΔΩΝ; on the reverse are the sun, moon and five planets. Berlin Mus. Cat. Macedon, p. 162, 1. Wt. 13·5 g. (vi, 482.)

[g]-[j] The gradual breaking up of Alexander's Empire is reflected in the Alexander coinage, which was at first continued unaltered by most of his successors, but on which other names besides that of the dead king presently began to appear. [g] Aspeias, Satrap of Susiana, put his name in the field of a tetradrachm, about 316-312 B.C. (vi, 488.) [h] Nicocles, King of Paphos in Cyprus, issued Alexander tetradrachms before 309 B.C. with his own name on the mane of Heracles' lion's scalp. (vi, 494.) By 300 B.C. Demetrius the Besieger was issuing gold staters [j] with Alexander's types but with the legend ΔΗΜΗΤΡΙΟΥ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΩΣ. E. T. Newell, The Coinages of Demetrius Poliorcetes, 1927, p. 14, note 1, adduces good grounds for supposing that the similar stater [i] with the name of Antigonus is probably to be referred to the son rather than to the father of Demetrius. (vi, 502.) [g] Brit. Mus. Wt. 16·94 g. [h] Formerly Yakountchikoff Coll. [i], [j] Brit. Mus. Wts. 8·6 g.; 8·55 g.

[k] Demetrius celebrated his victory off Salamis in Cyprus by the issue of tetradrachms minted at Salamis about 300 B.C. On the obverse is Victory upon the prow of a captured vessel, on the reverse Poseidon and the king's name and title. Brit. Mus. Wt. 17·24 g. (vi, 499.)

FORTIFICATIONS

[a] THE WALLS OF MESSENE built by Epaminondas in 370–369 B.C. furnish one of the best extant specimens of Greek military architecture, being built of finely wrought ashlar masonry. Beyond the figure in the picture are the remains of one of the gates, and the wall itself vanishes in the distance where it climbs the hillside. (vi, 90.)

[Phot. Hellenic Society]

[b] EURYALUS, the castle of Dionysius I above Syracuse. The photograph shows the remains of rooms and a wide passage that was once underground. Walls ran from this castle to the city and the fortification made Syracuse the strongest of all Greek cities. (vi, 119.)

EGYPT: THE LATER PHASE

Part of the so-called METTERNICH STELE, now in the Castle of Königswart near Marienbad. This is probably the best known of a type of magical stele, very common in small sizes, which well illustrates the superstitions of the religion of later days in Egypt, with its prayers, its figures of prophylactic snakes and crocodiles, etc. The idea of it is of course the victory of good, personified by the child Horus, over evil, in the next world. Fourth century B.C. (vi, 164.)

[a] The later HEXASTYLE DORIC TEMPLE at Posidonia (afterwards called Paestum), known as the 'Temple of Poseidon,' built in the fifth century B.C., perhaps in its first half. The photograph is taken from the east porch, just outside the threshold of the main door, and shows the two rows of inner columns, with some of the smaller upper columns and their architraves still in position. Much of the cella walls has been removed or destroyed: the columns and superstructure of the northern outer colonnade (or pteron), of the west porch, and of the west pteron, partly seen in the photograph, were all originally invisible from this point. (v, 446.)

[Phot. Hellenic Society]

[b] The west end of the PARTHENON at Athens, built, in its surviving form, by Ictinus and Callicrates, and begun in 447 B.C. This pediment contains the only important statues still in place. The explosion of 1687 A.D. blew out the middle of the temple, and the isolated columns here shown have been set up again in modern times: further restoration is now being carried out. The arch visible between the columns is Byzantine. Under the three marble steps can be seen the top of the older limestone substructure, which the builders of the surviving temple completely buried. (v, 448. For plan of the temple see no. 5, facing p. 464: for some of the sculptures see pp. 60, 62 above.)

[b] THE PARTHENON

[a] The PROPYLAEA at Athens, designed by Mnesicles, begun in 437 B.C., seen from the south-west. The photograph shows the north-west hall and part of the hexastyle Doric façade of the west porch, with the gap for the carriage-road between its central columns. Besides the obvious loss of all the roofing, much of the entablature, and parts of the Doric columns, the Ionic columns inside the west porch have fallen: they would have been partly visible from this point. (v, 451. For plan of the building see no. 3, facing p. 464.)

[Photograph by Mr M. Ziffo]

[b] The north-east Ionic column, inside the west porch of the PROPYLAEA, seen from below, and from the south-west. This column, with part of the marble ceiling, which originally covered the whole porch, has been thus re-erected in modern times. The upper part of one of the doors by which pedestrians passed through the wall separating the west and east porches can be seen, and through it one of the Doric columns of the east porch, black against the sky. (v, 450.)

[Photograph by Mr L. P. Thompson]

[c] The interior of the west porch of the PROPYLAEA, from the north-east, showing half one of its fallen Ionic capitals, badly damaged, placed upside down on the bottom drum of the fallen north-west Ionic column. The abacus of the capital has lost its egg-and-tongue carving. The rebuilt temple of Athena Nike, on its bastion, is partly visible through the Doric columns of the west façade. (v, 451.)

THE PROPYLAEA AT ATHENS

[a] The ERECHTHEUM at Athens, perhaps begun about 421 B.C., seen from the south-west. The lower part of the central portion is hidden by the ruins of the substructure of the old temple of Athena Polias, the top of which is roughly level with the Maiden Porch, visible to the right, and with the East Porch. The North Porch has lost its pediment, and all the roofing has disappeared: the frieze has lost its reliefs, which consisted of white marble figures applied to a background of black limestone. The central portion, with engaged columns and windows, is a Roman restoration, and there has been much judicious modern reconstruction. (v, 454. For plan of the temple see no. 4, facing p. 464.)

[Photograph by Mr M. Ziffo]

[b] The Maiden Porch of the ERECHTHEUM, from the south-east, partly restored, and strengthened with metal bars. The caryatid second from the left is in the British Museum: the figure seen in the photograph is a terra-cotta reproduction. The gap behind the pedestal at the north-east corner led to the staircase which descended into the interior. It can be seen that this Porch, unlike the other two, has dentils, but no frieze. (v, 454.)

THE ERECHTHEUM AT ATHENS

[a] The interior of the HEXASTYLE DORIC TEMPLE OF APOLLO at Bassae near Phigalea in Arcadia, built in the second half of the fifth century B.C. The photograph is taken from the inner part of the cella, looking north, and out through the north door and the north porch. The base of the single Corinthian column stands in the foreground, and some of the tongue-walls, with their engaged Ionic columns, partly rebuilt, are visible on each side. The curious spreading bases are still in position, but the capitals have perished, except for fragments, though some found complete were drawn in the early nineteenth century. These half-columns carried an architrave and a frieze, which is now in the British Museum. (v, 456. For plan of the temple see no. 5, facing p. 464: for part of the frieze of the temple see p. 64 [a].)

[Photograph by Mr L. P. Thompson]

[b] The same temple. The photograph is taken from the south-west corner of the outer part of the cella, looking north-west across the inner part of the cella and out of the east side-door, opposite which probably stood the god's statue. The base of the Corinthian column and one of the two southernmost tongue-walls, which projected at an angle of 45 degrees, are visible in the foreground. (v, 456.)

[Photograph by Mr L. P. Thompson]

[c] Haller von Hallerstein's drawing of the lost capital of the Corinthian column of the same temple, made soon after its discovery: the outer spirals had been destroyed before it was found. This is the earliest known Corinthian capital: notable features are the lowness and unusual form of the ring of acanthus leaves, the large size of the inner spirals, the palmette on the bell (which was originally taller), the absence of a sheath common to the outer and inner spirals, the heaviness of the abacus, and the painted decoration on the abacus and on the bell. THE ALEXANDER MOSAIC

Restoration of the east front of the Doric TEMPLE OF ATHENA ALEA at Tegea, in Arcadia: built of local marble in the first half of the fourth century B.C. The architect was the sculptor Scopas. The slender column-shaft and low straight echinus are typical of the period: the temple of Zeus at Nemea, perhaps a later work of the same architect, carries these tendencies even further. The Tegean temple had pedimental sculpture, not shown in the illustration, but of the metopes only those over the cella porches, inside the colonnade, were carved. The outer faces of the side-walls of the cella are in line with the axes of the penultimate columns of the façades: this is the classical practice in peripteral Doric temples, but in Ionic the axes of the cella walls usually coincide with those of these columns. (vi, 547, 550; plan of the temple, vi, opposite p. 558; Corinthian capital from interior on the next plate, p. 114 [a]; heads of statues from the pediment on p. 86 [a], [b] above.)

RESTORATION OF EAST FRONT OF TEMPLE OF ATHENA ALEA AT TEGEA

[a] Engaged marble CORINTHIAN CAPITAL from the half-columns inside the Doric TEMPLE OF ATHENA ALEA at Tegea, reconstructed from fragments. These capitals are low and squat: they show what is probably the earliest example of the fluted cauliculus sheathing the angle spirals, a feature which later became orthodox, but a single tall acanthus leaf replaces the inner spirals and central ornament. (vi, 548, 550; plan of the temple, vi, opposite p. 558: restoration of façade on the preceding plate, p. 112.)

[L.c., Pl. LXXVI]

[b] Marble CORINTHIAN CAPITAL designed for one of the inner columns of the circular tholos at Epidaurus, built by the sculptor Polyclitus the younger, probably between 360 and 330 B.C. This specimen, for unknown reasons, was buried unused, and is therefore wonderfully perfect. The design is light and delicate: the outer and inner spirals are independent, and do not spring from a sheath: above the inner spirals a flower takes the place of the palmette used in the earlier Corinthian capital of Bassae, illustrated on p. 78 [c] above. (vi, 549, 551; plan of the tholos, vi, opposite p. 558.)

[Phot. Hellenic Society]

[a] CAPITAL FROM TEMPLE OF ATHENA ALEA AT TEGEA

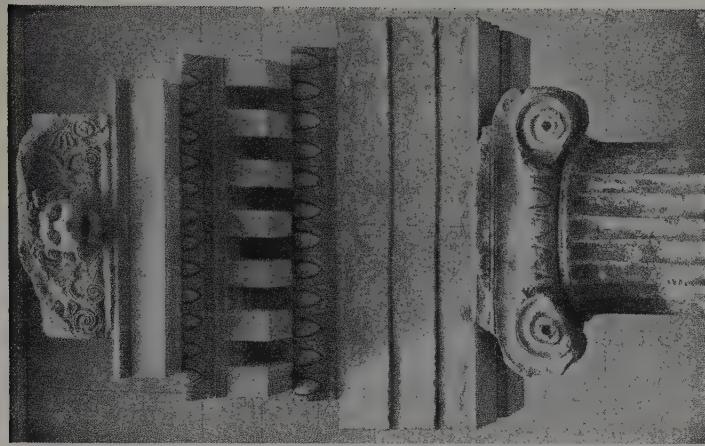

[b] CAPITAL DESIGNED FOR THE THOLOS AT EPIDAURUS

[a] Front and under views of the Corinthian capital of one of the engaged stone columns inside the circular Philippeum at Olympia, probably built by Alexander the Great. Both in general proportion and in detail these capitals on the whole anticipate later orthodoxy more nearly than do any of their predecessors, but the inner spirals and central ornament are omitted, as at Tegea, being replaced by a series of narrow upright leaves. (vi, 552.)

[Olympia, Ergebnisse, Die Baudenkmäler, Pl. LXXXI]

[b] Reconstructed cast at Berlin of upper part of one column and part of the side entablature from the marble Ionic temple of ATHENA POLIAS at Priene, dedicated by Alexander the Great: the triply-fasciated architrave, large dentils, and sima-crowned cornice are separated by egg-and-tongue ornament resting on bead-and-reel: the absence of a frieze between architrave and dentils has been disputed, but is almost certain. A. v. Gerkan has shown in Ath. Mitt., xlili, 1918, p. 165, that the dentils should be set a little farther back. In the capital, the eye of the volute is at once well outside the perpendicular of the upper diameter of the column-shaft and well above the horizontal of the bottom of the echinus. The sima is a genuine gutter, pierced with lion-head spouts. (vi, 554; plan of the temple, 3 opposite vi, p. 558.)
